KNIGHTS OF THE GOLDEN SUN

Do you feel a bit lonely when don't hear from your friends for a while? Imagine the loneliness the Archangels must feel when God goes silent... for 400 years!

That's the situation in which Michael and the other Archangels find themselves in Knights of the Golden Sun #1, the premiere issue of a mystical-metaphysical saga by Mark London & Mauricio Villareal that's sure to appeal to fans of the struggles of Castiel, Michael, and Lucifer in Supernatural.

"Knights of the Golden Sun takes place during the 400 years between the Old Testament and New Testament, during which God was completely silent," publisher Alex Stensby said. "The story follows Michael and the Archangels, protectors of Providence and humanity, as they do whatever it takes to defend the empty throne of Providence from would-be usurpers and disgraced angels, known as the Fallen. In order for the Archangels to overcome the darkness, they will need to discover their own humanity."

Writer Mark London explained that the inspiration for Knights of the Golden Sun came from "my wife, Laura. She made me see life from a different perspective, and my inspiration for the story was to write a comic that would give honor to everything we believe in. This story is for her."

Obviously, the Bible is an inspiration for the series, but there also seems to be a bit of a Paradise Lost influence as well. "It's funny that you mention [John] Milton's Paradise Lost, since one of my favorite movies of all time is Seven with Brad Pitt and Morgan Freeman," London said. "I remember watching it for the first time in theaters and thinking it was very well made and how unbelievable that twist was at the end that no one saw coming. So, I got curious about the literary works mentioned in the movie and devoured Paradise Lost by John Milton and the Divine Comedy by Dante Alighieri. This was many years ago, and although Knights of the Golden Sun is not about a serial killer using sin against man in the name of God, I guess the subject matter from the books is embedded somewhere in my psyche and Knights is somewhat sprinkled with them."

Knights of the Golden Sun focuses on the personal battle between Lucifer and Michael, almost becoming a dualistic

to that historical period. For example,

Roman and Greek armor details were included in the costume design, but we wanted to make them look like celestial beings, so we included some elements like gemstones and precious metals."

While Knights of the Golden Sun looks like the work of an established professional, this is actually Villareal's first battle of good versus evil. "I could have explored God's side and his reasons for leaving and where he went, but that is what Michael and the Archangels need to figure out: the reason for it all," London said. "So, by exploring the struggle between two brothers who were once very close, I think a richer story could be told. The way I see it, the real message of why God abandoned his throne is at the heart of Michael and Lucifer's struggle."

Where has God gone, and why is he not involved in this struggle? "In between the Old and New Testament, there is a time known as the 400 years of solitude during which God went silent; no one could hear the divine message," London explained. "I thought it would be interesting to explore what happened while he was gone. There are many questions and not enough answers, so if the reader can experience the story through the angels' point of view—see what's happening to the world, live through the unimaginable evils they must face—I think it makes for better storytelling..."

As to why God has gone silent, "you would have to ask the big man why he decided to take a little vacation," said London. "I have my own theories—and hopefully, the readers will discover them and have opinions of their own when they reach the end of the first arc."

Lucifer seems to be the driving force for this tale. What makes Lucifer so alluring as a literary figure? "In my opinion, a great villain needs to push the other characters to the edge, and there's no denying that Lucifer can accomplish this to perfection," London replied. "He's a sound Machiavellian, the greatest manipulator of all times, making others do what he wants but at the same time making them think that they are in control of what they are doing for his own benefit. When you have a character like Lucifer in your story, it may seem that he is a 'driving force,' but I can assure you there are other characters that will give even Lucifer a run for his money."

While the Bible is an obvious inspiration for the series, "Knights of the Golden Sun is not a religious book," London said. "That it borrows from the best seller of all time, sure. But it's a story for anyone who enjoys a grand tale of, yes, biblical proportions that at the end of the day everyone will see differently. What this story means for me should not dictate what the reader believes since it's fantasy, designed to take you on a wild journey with mad twists along the way..."

Artist Mauricio Villareal was inspired by London's script to use light and dark to visually underscore the conflict between the forces of light and dark. "When I first read Knights of the Golden Sun, the story was an inspiration in itself," Villareal explained. "It's an epic story with supernatural elements, powers, and all kinds of cool things. I just wanted to do it justice and find a way to express all these elements within the art, depending on the setting and the circumstances the characters are in. If the scene needs to represent a strong light and dark contrast, I'll try to do it."

Villareal presents angels as powerful forces rather than ethereal figures. "Before we started, we spent a lot of time talking about how these angels should look. Mark never asked for a specific appearance, but he discussed with me several details or elements that had to be in the angels' design because we wanted them to look like they belonged published comics work. "I'm a graphic designer, and illustration was always a hobby for me. I never thought it could be my full-time job. Because of that, I haven't had the chance to get published before. So, yes, this is my first published book and it is a dream come true for me."

Knights of the Golden Sun #1, a $3.99 full-color comic from Mad Cave Studios, is scheduled for November 14th release.
